Dear Mr. Larson:

During my husband's absence, I am endeavoring to acknowledge his mail.

We have no facilities for publishing. We were forced to have our books published privately when no publisher would accept them. It is not a method we would recommend except as a last resort. Since you have our books, you know that what we did was to type up the manuscript and have it reproduced by offset. The company which did it for us is able to do either that or set books in type. This method was faster.

Sincerely,

Lillian Weisberg
